

This Week's Instagram Contest – 177 Entries And TWO Winners!

Like Share 52 Tweet 5

Words by John Rogers @brainlove

Published May 15, 2015

Last week we launched the first #gvpics Instagram competition – asking you, dear readers, to use the #gvpics tag on your best Instagram photographs of Iceland. But not just the oft-seen aurora and landscapes shots – we asked for characters, towns, wilderness, dark corners, weird food, street art, etc etc etc).

We had 177 entries to go through, with a lot of people going back to their holidays here over the last few years and retrospectively tagging stuff up. Which is great! And this competition is going to keep running, so if you want to win a Grapevine t-shirt and have your photo put up on the Grapevine Instagram, get tagging!

AND THE WINNERS ARE:

We got two different entries with a flock of sheep as their subject. Both are great shots – one a wall of wool and curious eyes, the other an eerie sea of staring heads. Both are weirdly captivating. And so both win! Well done @ingibjorgolafs and @hannes_nrm, we'll be in touch to send the Grapevine t-shirt. And if #gvpics winners don't live in Iceland, we'll throw in a copy of our latest newspaper too.

And don't forget to enter yourself for the next round of #GVpics. Tag 'em up!

Like Share 52 Tweet 5

- capital area gvpics Instagram North photography south

0 Comments

Sort by Top

Add a comment...